Poverty of the "Non-Poor"

Joshua Cho

Very often, poverty among children can be all-encompassing as it makes them helpless, vulnerable and unable to protect themselves. Such children are among the poorest of the poor. In moral terms, such children often do not have loving, capable, and responsible parents to love and care for them properly and who fail to teach them right from wrong. These children are not taught to empathize with others — to rejoice with them or to feel their pain. Such children cannot know the happiness of "doing the right thing" or the remorse of "doing the wrong thing." As they grow up, their role models may only be those adults who get used to seeking violent means to solve problems and committing crimes. These poor teenagers are often forced to leave school to become underage laborers or even worse. Some are sold into child prostitution or recruited to be sea pirates or guerrilla fighters.

The dis-empowerment of women can be both physiological and social. Statistics from the United Nations verify that the world's women generally receive less education than men, and women constitute two-thirds of the world's illiterate population. Statistics also reveal that while women make up two-thirds of the world's labor force, women earn one-tenth of the world's income and

Poverty of the "Poor"

Poverty can be defined as a deficiency. The poor lack adequate food, safe shelter or clean drinking water. In this world, many are not provided with medical or social services. The poor often lack access to information and their children lack educational opportunities. The poor are generally ignorant of their legal rights and cannot afford lawyers, making them easy prey to bullying. They know not how to seek justice. We can conclude that the poor are generally dis-empowered; they may be deprived of their rights or may lose their rights. But this dis-empowerment impacts different social groups quite differently. Thus we must learn to see how children, teenagers, the elderly, women or the handicapped experience dis-empowerment in different ways.

The dis-empowerment of children and teenagers means there is a shortage of available resources for their developmental growth.

own less than one percent of the world's property. These poor women tend to be found in areas of extreme poverty.

Poverty of the “Non-Poor”: Their Identity Is Broken

In countries or regions where the majority is made up of the “poor,” a handful of the “non-poor” occupy positions of great authority and honor. Many “non-poor” live among the poor to take advantage of them. They are likely to be police officers, politicians, and landlords, and they establish their power through commerce, the courts and the political system. These powerful “non-poor” will use religious organizations, the media, the legal system, and the government to justify their power. They create stories, justify their actions, and create social systems to establish themselves in their powerful positions as absolute lords over the poor. They are united with one another, seeking all possible ways to consolidate and expand one another's power and authority. They use means of cheating, violence, and intimidation to bully the poor. In commerce, the “non-poor” snatch goods from the poor by forcing the poor to sell their goods to them at prices far below the fair market price. These greedy people know the poor are desperate and have little power to resist them. This is how the poor become victims of unfair trade practices.

The result is that the “non-poor” dominate the poor, playing god by controlling their poor victims, and become tyrants ruling over the poor and treating them as their captives. Accepting such a captive identity and expecting command and protection from the powerful “non-poor,” many poor people surrender their freedom to them. Obviously, these poor people lack a sense of self-worth. They consider themselves fated to be worthless, not good, impotent, and unproductive lackeys to their captors. Such poor people are filled with so much self-despising, self-withdrawal, and self-loathing so that they do not demand their rights to exert their free will. Unable to act independently and robbed of all hope, they forfeit their humanity. These people are at the lowest level of poverty. This kind of poverty is a thorough poverty, total poverty.

However, there are many places where the non-poor and the poor overlap. While the non-poor are not impoverished, they also experience the poverty of the poor. Their identity is likewise broken but in a different way. This is because when the non-poor play god in other people's lives, they lose their true selves. The very act of protecting their honor and plundering other people's right creates poverty within them. They are exceedingly poor because they live lives in terror, loneliness, and void. This kind of poverty is unique among the non-poor. When the non-poor take advantage of the social system for personal gain, they fear others will cheat them likewise. That explains why they always seek monopoly and fight to win, but the more they get, the more worried they become: Worried about failure and about losing what they have. Even when they see something true and good, they will still doubt its value.

It Is Hard for the “Non-Poor” to Believe in God and Experience the Gospel

What is most regrettable is that these “non-poor” find it harder than the poor to believe in God and experience the gospel. Mark 10 records that a rich man, when faced with the hollowness of his life, asks Jesus for eternal life and wants the assurance that his goodness qualifies him for eternal life. That is why he actually “runs” up to see Jesus.

It is unusual that a rich man would run up to see Jesus. Then in the blazing Palestinian sun and before the eyes of strangers, we see him kneeling before Jesus to ask, “Good teacher, what must I do to inherit eternal life?” (Mk 10:17) What a stunning act!

However, Jesus’ response is even more stunning. First of all, Jesus refuses being called “good teacher.” He says, “Why do you call me good? No one is good — except God alone.” Why does Jesus answer that way? Perhaps, the rich man, like other people, thinks that Jesus possesses some special power or wisdom that enables Him to solve the problem of eternal life. Therefore, the rich man regards Jesus as good. In the same way, we today look to good professional people such as a social worker, a counselor or a psychiatrist to seek ways to solve our problems. However, some questions are what social workers, counselors, and psychiatrists cannot answer. None of these experts can answer life’s basic question; only God can answer the basic question of life.

This may explain why Jesus refused to provide the so called best professional advice and to be called “good teacher.” He did not want to be reduced to be just an outstanding professional. Instead, Jesus Christ challenges the rich man to return to life’s basic question: Does the rich man accept that God is the basis of his life?

Is God the Basis of Man’s Life?

Jesus Christ goes on to remind the rich man to refocus his life on God and to listen afresh to God’s commandments. Jesus says, “You know the commandments: Do not murder, do not commit adultery, do not steal, do not give false testimony, do not defraud, honor your father and mother.” The expression of genuine faith is to listen to God’s commandments.

However, the rich man is not yet ready to receive the Words of Jesus Christ and he looks disappointed. He considers himself to be good already and is sure he spends his life doing good. He said, “Teacher, all these I have kept since I was a boy.”

At that moment, Jesus looks at the rich man with loving kindness and tells him the hard truth: “One thing you lack, go, sell everything you have and give to the poor, and you will have treasure in heaven. Then come, follow me.” (10:21) The young man is asked to leave everything behind and follow Jesus.

After listening to Jesus’ answer, the rich man cannot accept Jesus’ Words, regarding them as too demanding. He was troubled. Must one really sell everything one has and give to the poor in order to inherit eternal life? He cannot accept the Words of Jesus Christ. For that reason, Jesus Christ says, “It is easier for a camel to go through the eye of a needle than for a rich man to enter the kingdom of God.” (10:25) In other words, it is hard for those rich people who trust in themselves or have worldly power to inherit eternal life. Without knowing it, they trust themselves or value their material possession more than God. They are unable to give up their possessions and to allow Jesus to be all they have.

The Door of the Gospel Is Open to the “Poor” Non-Poor

As we know, here Jesus Christ emphasizes that, while it is hard for the rich to enter the kingdom of heaven, it is not impossible. Poverty itself is neither the necessary nor the sufficient condition to enter the God’s kingdom. The mystery of the kingdom of heaven is that God stands at the door of God’s kingdom which he has prepared for all people, both the poor and the non-poor. If a person recognizes that he is poor in spirit and considers himself to have nothing at all, and is willing to put everything into God’s hands, God will become all that he has. It is in this way that the door of God’s kingdom remains wide open for the “poor” non-poor. The non-poor can likewise experience freedom from the world’s power or authority and the joy of being in God’s arms, and enjoy the shalom of being in His presence.

Students' Testimonies of God's Call

The Fisher-girl Chosen by God

Lai Suk-fun (M.Div. I)

Suk-fun, Kam-wah and their children

The Small Wish of a Fisher-Girl

"For you created my inmost being; you knit me together in my mother's womb." (Ps 139:13) From an early age, I have deeply appreciated the meaning of this scripture verse. I was born into a Christian family and even while in my mother's womb, I had gone to church. I consider my parents' greatest gift to me is their enabling me to come in contact with the gospel and making it possible for me to know the Lord Jesus personally. This opportunity was also the most beautiful blessing in my life.

I remember when I was in junior secondary school, I heard my grandma exclaim in perfect contentment, "Thank heavens! My daughter can be a pastor! What a good thing it is!" Grandpa and grandma were fisher people. In the old days, most of their children had had no opportunity for education. Although my aunt, my father's younger sister, had been a fisher-girl, she could not only graduate from secondary school but could also finish her seminary training. She dedicated herself to be a pastor, much to the joy and satisfaction of my grandma. Under the imperceptible influence of my grandma, I had incubated my own secret wish that God would choose me, also a fisher-girl, to be a pastor.

"Pardon Me for My Little Faith, But Please Wait Until I ..."

In 1980, I went to study in The Hong Kong Institute of Education. After three years' training, I became a qualified teacher deeply engaged in the work of education. At that time, I took an oath, promising God: "Allow me to work in school for ten years. After ten years, I will leave the teaching post to serve you full time!"

Ten years passed me as quickly as flowing water. When I was 31 years of age, I remembered that ten years earlier, I had promised God to be a pastor. However, as I looked at my new-born daughter and my five-year-old son, suddenly the pressure of my family's financial burden was pressing so heavily on me that I lacked the courage to give up the steady income of my teaching post. As a result, I flatly refused God's call to me and answered Him by saying, "O Lord, I am sorry but this is indeed impossible at present! Pardon me for my little faith but please wait until I am 45. Then I will take early retirement and serve you full time...."

The Ups and Downs of Life Are Not Predictable

The years passed by quickly. During this period of time, I enjoyed my work as a teacher and was pleased to commit myself to serving my own church. Meanwhile, I also found our family life pleasant. Then in 2004, I faced a dramatic turning point in life. That year, just after we had moved to a bigger flat, my husband, Kam-wah, faced difficulties in his job and was consequently laid off. Our family finances were suddenly strained. We had to sell the flat at a loss to reduce the burden of a big mortgage. We had to start everything from scratch. From this incident I realized that the ups and downs of life are beyond human control! I had always presumed that my husband's job was secure and I never imagined that our safe world would collapse. Nothing in life is ever completely safe.

Approximately half a year later, when Kam-wah managed to find a job, his income was unstable. However, both of us thanked God for the period of time during which Kam-wah was looking for a job because God gave us more time to build up a closer husband-wife relationship. This time also helped us experience the truth of God's promise in Psalm 23: "The Lord is our shepherd and I shall not be in want." Despite being in dire financial straits in our daily living, God allowed our hearts to be filled with peace and joy. However, at that time I did not recall my promise to serve God full time. It seemed I had forgotten all about it.

God Called Again When I Was 45 Years Old

Then in February 2008, God made His call to me loud and clear. It came through a sermon in one Sunday Worship Service and it reawakened my resolution to set out on the road of consecration. During that worship service, my pastor told us the story of Mary who took about a pint of pure nard, an expensive perfume, and poured on Jesus' feet. Mary unreservedly poured out the bottle of perfume, which would cost her a year's wage, all for her Lord Jesus. She loved the Lord Jesus deeply. Because of her close relationship with Jesus, she seized that crucial moment. Our pastor challenged us to give our all in response to God's love and encouraged us to put aside our work to study in the church's one-year church ministry program. At that moment, the lyrics of the hymn we sang moved me deeply: "All that has been achieved can be discarded and all my failure can also be ...."

At that moment I wanted to respond to God's call, yet I still had many inner struggles. As a result, I still could not gather enough courage to walk down to the front.

Three days later I joined the church's Wednesday evening prayer meeting. That evening, our pastor preached from the same scripture text again and called all those willing to forsake everything and commit themselves to the Lord to walk down to the front to make the commitment. At that time, my heart was melted by the love of God and I could no longer resist God's call. At last, I plucked up my courage to walk down to the front. When our pastor prayed for me, I could not stop my tears from slowly flowing down as I deeply experienced the great love of the Lord Jesus. I did not want to miss the opportunity again and I was determined to consecrate myself to the Lord. In the past I could never have imagined that I had almost forgotten my pledge of consecration to God but God in His great wisdom had never forgotten. Right then I recalled my promise to God: "At the age of forty five... at the age of forty five..." Amazingly, God has never forgotten my promise and He has renewed His call to me when I was forty five years old.

One Year's Wage One Year's Study Expense

After responding to God's call, I began to consider quitting my job to begin full time seminary training. When I shared the idea of serving God full time with my husband, he strongly supported my decision and encouraged me to "take a step forward." However, in my heart, I was still worried about the family's financial needs for I did not want to impose a heavier burden on my husband. In March not long after our conversation, Kam-wah suddenly received a sizeable bonus from his company, an amount that was equal to one year of my salary. It seemed that God was saying to me, "Do you still have no faith in me? I am your shepherd and you shall not be in want. Do you not know that I, your God, have the power to provide for your family's needs? Trust in me!" I have always been one with little faith, yet God still takes care of me. At that time, I came to feel deeply that God cared for me in my weaknesses. He actually cared so much for me personally!

So, I summoned enough courage to leave my teaching post after some 25 years in the education field and I enrolled to study in my church's ministry training program. The study that year not only enriched my self-understanding but also provided me the opportunity to reflect on my spiritual life. It helped me begin to acquire theological knowledge systematically. After completing a year's training, the Lord led me to enter into full time ministry in my own church where I served as an assistant minister.

“My Power Is Made Perfect in Weakness”

I joined the church's ministry team but then in those two years, the church was going through a series of personnel changes, and as a result the pastor and several ministers resigned in succession. Seeing my mother church facing so many difficulties, my heart was bleeding. The result was that my spiritual condition was at its lowest level. All along, I held fast to God as I believed that, through it all, God must have a purpose to allow me to be in my present ministry post. In those tough times, I learned to pray earnestly for the church with the strong conviction that God would take good care of the church He continued to love. As my prayer life was strengthened, the personnel problems within the church did not obstruct my commitment to God. Instead, this experience taught me to realize that man is by nature weak and in constant need of God's mercy. Facing different challenges, we must claim the Christian truth and stand firm as we trust in God's Word. God's Word must remain our standard and guide in life so that we do not drift with the changing currents of the world.

After serving two years in my church, God led me to enter HKBTS to receive three years' full time seminary training. As I return to study in school, I need to overcome all kinds of obstacles. Being one of little faith, I indeed fear that I lack the ability to handle the pressure of full time study. But the Word of God encourages me again and again: “My grace is sufficient for you, for my power is made perfect in weakness.” (2 Cor 12:9) Whenever I recall Jesus' sayings, my faith is soon restored and I dare to march forward without fear. Since God has provided for me abundantly in material, I believe He will also give me sufficient ability and care for me with all that I need. Since my past experience of God's call has been so good and true, I am truly convinced that the experience of these few years of seminary study will similarly be good and true as I can know the Lord who called me all the more deeply.

“O Lord, thank You for patiently waiting for my response after so many years! O Lord, I am willing to submit to You!”

God's Call to Me Remains Unchanged for Ten Years

Chan Tsz-chiu (M.Div. I)

Tsz-chiu and Kit-ming

Lingering between Consecration and Desertion

As early as ten years ago, the thought of serving God full time began to emerge. In the past months, my mind lingered between consecration and desertion. I had once made up my mind to follow my yearning to serve God full time, then there was also a time when I felt downhearted, shedding tears as I refused to accept God's call.

As a child, I followed my elder sister to church where I came to know Jesus in Sunday School. At that time, I enjoyed going to church on Sundays to have fun with other children. However, I had some doubts about the Bible stories but I had never dared to mention them to anyone. In primary four, I studied in a school with no religious affiliation. Unknowingly, I gradually drifted away from God.

My remaining primary and secondary school life quickly passed by. In 2001, I began to study in Shu Yan College and came to join Shu Yan Students Christian Fellowship. Through their fine Christian witness, God helped me once again take my Christian faith seriously and I renewed my consecration to God. Despite my inner struggles and doubts that I still could not live a good Christian life, the Bible gave me a definite answer. Christianity demands that a Christian should not only confess his sin and believe in Jesus' resurrection, but he also needs to submit his life's sovereignty to God. This instruction from the Bible awakened me and I once again asked God to come into my heart, as I dedicated my life's sovereignty to Him.

In these fiery years of my studies, I also learned to read God's Word and listen to what He was saying to me. The instructors in the fellowship led us to do group Bible study and taught us how to follow Christ as His disciples according to the teachings of the Bible. Studying the Word of God amazed me. I was astounded to find that the scriptures I read as a university student were much more in-depth in meaning than the Bible stories I had heard as a child. At that time I deeply felt that if I could bring a person to God through His Word that would be very meaningful. Therefore, I determined to be a pastor, dedicating myself to teaching people the truth in the Bible. Soon after that, I had had lunch with my mother and I asked her, "If I studied in a seminary to become a pastor, what would you say?" Her immediate active and positive response was music to my ears. It was a confirmation from someone who might have refused me. From then on, the seed of "studying in a seminary to become a pastor" began to grow in my heart day by day.

During Spiritual Depression I Experienced God's Wholly Acceptance

After graduation, I was able to find a job quickly but soon after that my Christian pilgrimage fell to a low ebb. From 2006 to 2007, I went through a period of spiritual depression when I did not read the Bible, pray, do personal devotional, and join any Christian worship or fellowship. I doubted myself fundamentally. When I faced my true self, I considered myself to be unworthy of being called a “Christian,” nor even a “good person.” Although I was not indulging in a life of luxury, I was like someone lost on the open sea as every day I led a meaningless life without direction.

Yet, the grace of God is sufficient as He led me to work in an organization serving mentally handicapped people. I was able to move into their quarter and live with them. During that time, even when I lost my temper for no good reason a few times, they continued to accept me, even taking the initiative to talk with me and forgiving me again and again. God made use of the experience in those days to lead me to reflect: Did not the pure, true love, and tolerance of this group of mentally handicapped people reveal to me that God not only deeply understood my deep-rooted bad habits but also accepted me wholly as a sinner? I came to realize how my own sinful nature had been troubling me and I knew that I needed to return to God's grace once again.

From Self-Negation to God's Affirmation

In 2008, I returned to my mother church, Kwun Tong Swatow Baptist Church, and began learning and growing once again. Two years later, I had the opportunity to share with the pastor my resolution to serve God full time. He encouraged me to bring along “the scripture verse that goes to the depth of my heart” to a retreat where I could search for God's will. Just when I was all prepared and about to go on my retreat, I was suddenly beset by my dark side which made me feel unworthy of God's call and caused me to question my true motives for serving God full time. On the way to the retreat center, I became aware of a certain building. One side of its outer wall had been repainted, making it look clean and tidy as well as new and bright. However, the paint was peeling off in many parts of the other side of the wall so that it looked extremely ruined. The image of this building helped me realize that God knows both my bright outlook and my gloomy inside. Despite my own unworthiness, I was encouraged to know that God clearly knows who I am. I then was able to pluck up my courage to continue going forward in search of His will for my life.

pray, read the Bible and sing hymns, and to study the scripture narrative on the “rich young man” recorded in three of the gospels. It was this passage that struck me to the depth of my heart. Every time when I considered practicing literally the teaching of “selling everything you have,” I was worried and wondered whether I would have to sell everything I had. That day, when I studied that passage in detail, I found that I had missed another key point: “Give to the poor.” It turned out that I had focused on “selling everything you have” and failed to notice that the scripture reminds me to share what I have with those poor in spirit. I had missed that the scripture verse calls me to teach the biblical truths I know to those who are poor in spirit, sharing with them the love of God, and caring for my brothers and sisters in need.

Leaving the retreat center, I saw at the entrance the warm light of the setting sun through the branches of a big tree. This picture reminded me of an almond tree branch mentioned in the first chapter of Jeremiah as God's promise that He will certainly keep watch to make sure His Word is fulfilled. On that day, God reaffirmed that since He had called me, He would ensure I would have enough faith to follow Him in going forward and to learn to store up treasures in heaven.

How Can I Race with Horses?

Three months later, in mid 2010, I began working as an administrative clerk in my mother church. At that time, I was taking a certificate program in Christian Education. Joining the ranks of those serving in my mother church enabled me to have more learning opportunities and to embark upon a journey of an in-depth reflection of my Christian faith. At my work post, I needed to cope with all kinds of problems that were related to my church's shepherding work, to determine my own view among diverse opinions, and to find a balance between accommodating love and giving clear guidance. After a year and a half, I found myself physically and mentally exhausted and I also saw that my passion for the gospel was gradually fading.

In December 2011, I went through a non-peaceful Christmas Eve. That night I felt depressed and I wanted to quit my post to avoid my current predicament by using the excuse that I was applying to study in a seminary. But in fact, not only did I want to resign from my work at the church, but I even also wanted to cast aside my call from God! Just when I could stand it no more, a scripture verse popped up in my mind: "If you have raced with men on foot and they have worn you out, how can you compete with horses? If you stumble in safe country, how will you manage in the thickets by the Jordan?" (Jer 12:5)

Having finished the church's Christmas Eve activity, I returned home and found my wife sound asleep. Then I alone prayed to God in the sitting room. When I prayed, I began confessing that I had abused God's gift by saying something I should not have said, that at times I was presumptuous, and that I had many evil thoughts, even to the point of assuming that I was acting in a righteous way. At that moment, the picture of "racing with horses" once again hovering in my mind. I became aware that God knew well what an awful state of mind I had been in. Still, He kept telling me clearly: "If you could not help feeling tired upon walking a certain distance along this path today, how can you compete with horses in the future? In the days to come, as a pastoral worker, you have to face situations much more difficult and complicated than today's problems, are you willing to face them by counting on me?" Both God's warning and consolation enabled me to affirm my consecration and response to God's call to be a pastor to proclaim the Bible's truth. Perhaps the road in the future will be more difficult than today's road, but I am convinced that whatever may happen, God will still be with me and make me a fortified city, an iron pillar, and a bronze wall. Through His support, I will have renewed strength from Him to face everything.

The Call from God Has Never Changed

Reflecting upon my struggle and my wanderings along the road of consecration throughout the past ten years, one thing is for sure: God has been calling me from the very beginning. He shepherds those who are poor in spirit and those thirsty for righteousness, bringing them back to Him with teachings in the Bible. Although I must face my own limitations and all kinds of difficulties, none of these will stop me from continuing to commit myself to serve God because He has always kept watch over the call that He put in my heart.

Before I applied to study in the seminary, I had asked my mother once again, "What would you say if I go to study theology and to become a pastor?" Her response was no longer as active and positive as before but she was still willing to support me with other family members. In face of this problem, the things I had to consider were admittedly different from those of ten years ago for I now had a family of my own and I had a completely different set of commitments. I thank God for my mother's support and also for my wife, Kit-ming, who had always co-walked with me in these few years. She has not only gone through the whole process of how I have experienced God's call, but has also fully supported me to set out on the road of consecration.

Throughout these ten years, God's call to me has not changed. God, who is the author and finisher of my faith, has paved the way for me, leading me to study and be trained at HKBTS. From now on, I am willing to study the Bible in greater depth. I also hope that God will strengthen me in my weaknesses and rebuild my life so that I can offer up to Him service that is pleasing to Him and become a servant who shepherds His sheep, teaching them faithfully.

Academic Affairs News

The Full Time Ministry Seminar

The Full Time Ministry Seminar was held on October 27 last year. That day Dr. Andres Tang, Professor of Christian Thought (Theology and Culture), gave a talk on "What Is the Purpose of Studying Theology?" Other program features included introduction to HKBTS's study programs and seminary life, sharing from new students and alumni, and meeting with professors and seminary students. All these help participants know more about God's call, full time ministry, and the Seminary's study programs.

Joint Programs Graduation Ceremony

The Seminary's Joint Programs Graduation Ceremony of the Main Program, Lay Theological Education Department, and Distance Education Program was held on November 25 at Kowloon City Baptist Church. This year there were 36 graduating degree students (together with those diploma and certificate students in the same program), and 273 graduates from the diploma and certificate programs. Nearly 1,300 guests attended the ceremony.

Faculty Movement

Dr. Jonathan Lo has been appointed Visiting Assistant Professor of New Testament effective January 1, 2013. Dr. Lo received his Doctor of Philosophy degree from University of Edinburgh and his research interest includes the Old Testament in the New Testament, the Gospels, Christology, Christian Origins, Biblical Theology, and Biblical Greek.

Dr. Alexander Mak, Assistant Professor of New Testament, left his post on January 1. We thank Dr. Mak for his faithful service to the Seminary in the past and pray for God's blessings for His servant as He will lead him to set foot on a new ministry path.

Dr. Lindsay Robertson, Associate Professor of Christian Thought (Theology and Philosophy), will be on deputation in Australia from January to June.

The Winter Intensive Courses

The Winter Intensive Courses were conducted from January 7 to 11. The two courses offered were: "Advanced Homiletics" taught by Dr. Sam Tsang, Associate Professor of New Testament and "Ezra and

Publication News

In November, Dr. Wong Fook-kong's new book, Seasons of Our Lives: Spirituality of the Poetic and Wisdom Literature, the second volume in the Seminary's Christian Spirituality series, has been published. Dr. Wong reflects on what spirituality means in different seasons of a Christian's life – spring (beginnings), summer (to have and to hold), fall (acceptance) and winter (letting go). Dr. Wong show us these seasons through the lenses of poetic and wisdom literature. Specific issues discussed include the meaning of contentment, dealing with pain and suffering, facing mid-life and coming to terms with death.

Hill Road Journal (issue 30) was published in late January with the theme "Mission." There are a total of six theme articles. These articles are translated into Chinese and published in this issue. Five are from Dr. Brian Stanley who was the speaker in last year's Baptist Mission Week and one is written by the Rev. Pak Loh. (1) "1792 — William Carey and the Rediscovery of the Great Commission," (2) "1910 — New Partners in the Great Commission: Baptists from East and West at the World Missionary Conference in Edinburgh," (3) "1974 — Redefining the Great Commission: The Lausanne Congress," (4) "The Biblical Foundations of Christian Mission," (5) "What Has Evangelism to Do with the Environment?" The sixth article, entitled "Dancing with the Missional Theology: From Lausanne Covenant to Cape Town Commitment" is contributed by Rev. Pak Loh, Director of Mission Dynamics Center. Besides, there are several papers and book reviews. Hill Road Journal is available at the Seminary or in local Christian bookstores, for enquiries please call 2768 5168.

Precious Moments

October 21, 2012 Parents' Day

Parents' Day is the time for "a family's get-together." This year's theme was "The Road of Grace" with the purpose of inviting students' family members, relatives, and friends to come to the Seminary for a sight-seeing tour, getting together and feasting. The hope is that they will understand that full time ministry is a road blessed by God's grace. In the chapel meeting, there was a gospel message (preached by a teacher), followed by a time for students and alumni to share their testimonies of God's grace.

October 27, 2012 Full Time Ministry Seminar

"Full time Ministry Seminary" was specially held for brothers and sisters interested in exploring full time ministry, in having the opportunity to reflect on God's call and in knowing more about the Seminary's study programs. In the picture, our teacher Dr. Andres Tang was delivering a message entitled, "What Is the Purpose of Studying Theology?"

November 8, 2012 All Seminary Prayer Meeting

This was the second all seminary prayer meeting during the fall semester. The entire seminary community prayed first for the teachers, then students and finally for the staff, voicing our specific needs before God's throne of grace.

November 17, 2012 Distance Education Program Topical Seminar

Regular topical seminars are held through the Distance Education Program. The speaker of this particular seminar was Dr. Anna Lee, Assistant Professor of Old Testament at the Seminary. She spoke on the topic, "The Prophet Who Loves Reading the Bible: Application of 'Intertextuality' as Viewed from Zechariah." These public seminars are designed for Christian brothers and sisters, and these seminars often receive enthusiastic responses.

November 25, 2012 Joint Programs Graduation Ceremony

On that day at Kowloon City Baptist Church the Joint Programs Graduation Ceremony was held. The Ceremony celebrated with graduates from the Seminary's Ministerial Preparation Program (the sixty-first class), Lay Theological Education Department (the thirteen class) and the Distance Education Program (the twelve class). In the 2011-2012 school year there were 36 graduating degree students (together with those diploma and certificate students in the same program) and 273 graduates from the diploma and certificate programs. Thank God for nearly 1,300 guests who joined the ceremony in offering up our praise and thanksgiving to God.

President Joshua Cho delivered the graduation address entitled, "The Gospel of Jesus Christ: An Integral Mission."

Student representative Leung Lai-bun gave the Graduates' Speech and presented a souvenir to the alma mater.

December 17, 2012 Christmas Worship: The Prince of Peace

Every year, the Christmas Worship Service was jointly organized by HKBTS and the Alumni Association. This year's theme was "Prince of Peace." On this day, the entire seminary community came together. The group included teachers and students, staff and alumni who together offered up their worship to God and commemorated the Savior's birth. This is also a day of celebration when alumni return to the alma mater for their annual reunion. In recent years, a large number of alumni have made it a tradition to meet old friends on this special Christmas celebration. Their joyous laughter fills the Seminary with Christmas spirit.
